Emerson Pickett Log House, site
Frederick Road (MD 144), Lisbon
continued

7.1 Description

Exceptionally large for a log house, this building, almost square, covered with clapboard, has lost a large section of its foundations at the rear and is in imminent danger of collapse. The house faces north onto Frederick Road. Four bays by two, 2 1/2 stories high, a large cross-gable style peaked dormer with sawtooth decoration at the cornices has been added to the north slope of the roof. Exterior chimneys raise to the peak at each end of the house from heating fireplaces. The first floor front elevation contains two doors and two sets of 6/6 sash windows. At the second floor level are four windows containing sash of 2/2 panes. The full-length shed-roofed porch has square posts with Victorian brackets at the eaves.

Numerous alterations include removal of partitions to the interior, erosion of the cellar walls, exterior and interior, and changes in some windows from 6/6 to 2/2 lights, as well as a partly removed chimney with a tin flue replacing the top 12'-20' of the stack.

If bearing log walls have been allowed to deteriorate this may be a hopeless restoration job.

This house has been demolished. (JKC, 1998)
