DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Joshua B. Day house is a three bay vernacular farm house of Victorian Gothic style as typified by the steep gables and the two over two elongated windows; this style of architecture was popular from 1840-90. The Day house was built around 1881-82, according to the date of purchase of the property in the Howard County land records, and according to the information given by Frances Day, granddaughter of Joshua, who was born in 1920 and who lived in the house until 1974.

The house is a three bay wide four gable two and one half stories cross-shaped wooden structure, originally faced with clapboard but recently overlaid with white wood-grained aluminum siding. The main wing of the house running east-west and facing Tridelphia Road is approximately thirty-five feet in length and twenty feet wide. The back wing running north-south is approximately thirty feet long and fifteen feet wide.

The gabled roof was originally covered with wooden shingles but was later overlaid with tin; presently it is black asphalt. There were two chimneys on the main wing and one on the back wing; these have been removed. The chimneys serviced flues to the wood burning stoves in each room; these flues were encased in wooden mantlepices which have also been removed.

The facade is punctuated by a steep gable centered on the east-west roof and concurrent with its roofline; it contains a small arched two over two window. The fenestration on the first and second floors is symmetrical; however the second floor has single two over two windows while the first floor has double two over two windows on either side of the central entrance. The entrance has a wooden door with lovely double carved panels; the upper two panels comprise the top two thirds of the door and are arched while the bottom third has two rectangular panels. The door is flanked on both sides by three rectangular lights with a wooden rectangular panel at the bottom; there are four rectangular lights across the top. There is a first floor covered porch extending thirty feet by seven feet across the facade; its roof is supported by four square wooden columns having simple one on one square capital. The porch is surrounded by an ornately carved wooden balustrade, and has a wooden tongue and groove flooring. Three steps ten feet long and constructed of cinderblock lead to the ground level.

On the east side of the main wing there is a three-sided bay window, each section bearing a two over two window, on the first floor; a two over two window on the second floor; and a small arched two over two window on the attic level.

On the west side of the main wing there was originally a covered porch with an entrance. The present owners have removed this structure and have replaced the door with a window which is smaller than the original fenestration and which is one over one. Directly above is a two over two window on the second floor, and the small two over two window in the attic, which is arched.

The west side of the back wing was originally two bay wide, having symmetrical fenestration of two over two windows and a first floor entrance in the southernmost bay. Extending the entire length of this wing was a one storey covered porch, approximately ten feet wide. There was a well under the porch, and a trap door in the roof for lowering a ladder as needed. This porch has been enclosed and now has two small one over one windows at the north end, a central entrance, and one large picture window at the south end. At the south end of the porch is the original dairy measuring ten feet by ten feet and having a shed roof; its west wall has one small two over two window. Underneath the dairy was a twenty feet deep root cellar. In the 1930's Marvin Day, father of Frances, had installed in the dairy a refrigeration unit, one of the first in Howard County; the concrete structure remains in place. The entrance to the dairy is from the porch.

On the south wall of the back wing there is one two over two window, slightly off-center, a centered two over two window on the second floor, and above this a small rectangular two over two window at the attic level. At foundation level there is a set of wooden cellar doors leading to the cellar which originally had a dirt floor; here may be seen the large split logs which were used for the sub-flooring.

The east side of the back wing is also two bays wide with two over two windows symmetrically placed.

Originally, all of the windows in the house were fitted with heavy wooden working shutters (Miss Day remembers these as always having been painted green while the house was white or cream). These shutters remain on the front and dairy fenestration, and are now painted black; all others have been removed.

The original house sits on a stone foundation which is approximately one to two feet thick and which is exposed above ground approximately two feet.

Floor plans of the original house are attached.

It is on the back southeast corner that the present owners, Norman and Linda Reizen, constructed in 1977 a two storey addition measuring twenty-six feet west to east and sixteen feet north to south. It extends several feet east of the main wing, but its roofline is consistent with that of the original. The south wall (in back) contains three bays, the center bay being a double glass door entrance and the end bays being double single pane windows. The new windows have been kept proportionate to the original windows. There are ~~two~~ bays on the second floor. There is a one storey porch four feet wide running the length of the addition and wrapping around the east end. Its roof is supported by four square white columns on the south side (consistent with those on the front porch) and two square white columns on the east side. This east wall contains one double glass window, like those on the south wall, on the first floor. The second floor has a three-sided bay window which is consistent with the bay window on the east side of the main wing of the original house. On the north side of the addition there is a two storey semi-circular wall with a skylight; inside, this carries a spiral staircase. Adjacent to this is a brick chimney for the fireplace. The local architect for the addition was Potts.

The interior of the house remains unaltered with the following exceptions: The enclosed porch has been divided, ^{into} a dining area, a laundry room, and a powder room. The former window has been made into an open pass-through. The floor is ceramic tile.

The back stairs have been removed from the kitchen, and the facilities completely modernized. The floor is ceramic tile.

The dining room east window has been replaced with a double glass door leading to the new addition.

The zinc floor in the bay window (formerly used as an atrium) has been covered. Upstairs, the first bedroom on the back wing has been partitioned off to make a large bathroom. The back bedroom wall running north-south has been moved towards the west side to make a bath, using the additional space and the former hall to make a bedroom.

The plaster walls have been overlaid with wallboard.

The original pine flooring remains in place.

The attic is structurally unaltered; it is plastered and has pine flooring. There is a room running north-south the entire length of the house; the back gable and the two end gables are partitioned into small rooms. Originally, these quartered the household help.

The front staircase has a decorative wooden scroll trim along its baseboard, and the pine wood treads have been refinished.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Joshua B. Day house is significant architecturally and historically because it is a typical example of the Victorian Gothic farmhouses which are apparent in rural Howard, and surrounding areas, and because the Day Family has been an integral part of the community for the past one hundred fifty years or more.

The land on which the house is located is a portion of the property which was conveyed on February 3, 1882 to Joshua B. Day by James MacKubin, trustee for William S. Isaacs upon the latter's petition of May 30, 1879 " for the benefit of the Insolvent Law ". (Howard County Land Records Liber LJW 44 Folio 447). Isaacs had purchased 112 acres from John Orem on May 11, 1867 (Howard County Land Records Liber WWW 27 Folio 240). Of these 112 acres Joshua B. Day purchased 61 acres, 1 rod, 32 square perches; another 37 acres were purchased by William Musgrove. Survey made by John A. Denton.

On January 1, 1921 Joshua B. Day conveyed this property to his youngest son, Marvin W. Day and two daughters, Annie M. Day and Sarah E. Day, as tenants in common. Marvin received one half undivided interest, and each daughter received one fourth undivided interest " for and during their single or unmarried lives only, and upon or after the marriage or death of either, whichever shall first occur, the one fourth interest-----will convey to Marvin W. Day ". (Howard County Land Records Liber H.B.N. 111 Folio 386). Sarah E. Day died about 1937 and Annie M. Day died in 1966 causing the entire property to revert to Marvin W. Day.

On December 19, 1966 Marvin W. Day and Carrie B. Day, his wife conveyed this property and other properties (138 acres total) to C. Orman Manahan, as trustee (Howard Land Records Liber 463 Folio 548) to be immediately reconveyed to Marvin W. Day, Carrie B. Day, and their daughter, Frances Louise Day, (Howard County Land Records Liber 463 Folio 549). This transfer was for the purpose of including their daughter, Frances, as joint tenant.

After the death of Marvin W. Day (March 10, 1967) Carrie B. Day and Frances Louise Day became surviving joint tenants; but on January 19, 1973 Carrie B. Day conveyed full ownership to her daughter, Frances, who agreed to "care for her at home on the hereinafter described property, or in such places as from time to time might be mutually agreeable". (Howard County Land Records Liber 0624 Folio 691)

Frances Louise Day sold the property to Walgrow Joint Venture Co. for development purposes: June 18, 1974 (Howard County Land Records Liber 0686 Folio 668). The area is now named The Hermitage. When surveyed by Boender Associates, Inc., the property included 145.327 acres rather than the previously recorded 138 acres.

Norman and Linda Reizen purchased 2.264 acres from Walgrow Joint Venture Co. on April 29, 1977 (Howard County Land Records Liber 0821 Folio 649). This property contains the Joshua B. Day house. It is in excellent condition, and the present owners have retained the original house with minor interior and exterior alterations, excepting an harmonious addition in the back. It is a fine example of maintaining architectural integrity while adapting an older home to modern use.
