Description of Property and Eligibility Determination:

The abandoned farmstead, dating to the first half of the twentieth century, for the most part, includes a frame, ca. 1930 house, a small frame tenant house, concrete block equipment storage shed, a frame and concrete block barn with extensions, a frame shed and a frame corncrib, plus a concrete block shed and equipment storage shed. In the late nineteenth century the farmland may have been part of a tenant farm, possibly connected with the Milton Shipley House (H-645), located at 2920 MD 32.

This complex of deteriorating and long abandoned buildings is typical for its time frame, and is composed of structures which lack architectural and historical significance. The dwelling is an undistinguished variation of a foursquare structure. It is open to the elements and has been vandalized. The agricultural outbuildings are equally undistinguished in terms of their architectural and structural components and some are very deteriorated. The property, in its current state, lacks any architectural significance and therefore would not meet the National Register criterion C. In addition, it has no known significant association with important persons or events, thus it is not significant under Criteria A, or B. As documented in the archeological report Phase I Archeological Survey, US 29; Hopkins-Gorman Road Wetland Mitigation (Opus Site), the newly identified site 18HO237 is the archeological component of the farmstead, which was also determined to lack significance to warrant inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion D.
