WORTHINGTON'S QUARTERS Simpsonville

circa 1755

Private

This marvelous county landmark has a fascinating history as the tract of land on which it stands, "Wincopin Neck", was originally surveyed by Benjamin Warfield et al, whose only daughter, Elizabeth married Colonel Henry Ridgely of Montpelier. Wincopin Neck later came into the hands of Richard Warfield, II who gave it to his only son, Alexander. The Maryland Gazette carried an article in 1755 on the death of Richard II at age 79 and related that his son Alexander, had located on "Wincopin Neck" and Warfield's Contrivance. This would date Worthington's Quarters at 1755.

A five bay wide, one room deep, two story stone structure with rear appendages, and central door and hall, it has many similarities in plan to its neighbor Wildwood, the Dower House of the property.

"White Hall", an old homestead having a history of more than two centuraes still stands today upon a part of "Wincopin Neck", a joint survey made by two brothers, Benjamin and Richard Warfield II, sons of Richard and Elinor (Browne) Warfield, situated on the Middle Brandh of the Patuxent River, adjoining "Montpelier" in Howard County, Maryland. It is one of the oldest homes in the State and although it is now unoccupied, it has a proud record which represents itimate contacts with numerous founders of many pages of Maryland History.

The house is a rough-cast brick, now showing its age. Several years ago a section of the walls was shingled in order to preserve a portion which was rapidly deteriorating as a result of the crumbling protective cement. It is indeed remarkable that the two long granite steps which lead up to the front porth have maintained their perfect composition throughout the centuries. These slass were obtained from the quarry at Port Deposit and were put into place when the house was built.

within the front door there is a wide and spacious hall, with the stairway on the left and directly ahead a door opening on the large porch in the rear of the house, from which can be seen the twin bridges which span the winding Middle Patuxent River which flows near the "White Hall " property, connecting a narrow country dirt road, which at one time was the shortest route to Laurel, but is now impassable for qutomobiles because of the weeds and washouts.

Although the large wood stove has been removed from the spacious room on either side of the hall, the sheets of metal over a section of the wall and ceiling, together with the chimney hole and large open fireplac3s, are reminders of the methods used for heating the rooms during the cold winters. The deep window wills convincingly indicate the thinckness of the walls which were a study protection from the elements. The large rooms, high ceiling, and wide hallways, speak unerringly that this hughe builing was onee the home of luxury.

In the rear of the house on the left of the hall is the kitchen, flanked by a pantry almost as large as the spacious kitchen itslef. From there kitchen there are two outs ide doors, one which leads to the back porch and the other to the side of the house, where at a short distance is the well a over which the kitchen basket one hung to draw up the water. From the kitchen there is also a back stairway wich leads to the servants quaters on the second floor.

The second floor is divided into two separate s ections by a few steps which connect the hall stairway. Usually the bedrooms on one side of the has house were used by the members of the household and those on the other side were used by guests who never failed to enhance the prevailing atmosphere of southern hospitality.

avoid confusion between this home and the "White Hall" of its neighboring county Anne Arundel at Annapolis. At the time of this writing, 1936, the neighbors in the vicinity regard it as the "old hegeman Homestead" for in the late generations it was occupied by the Hegemen Family for over a half a centruy and since then, there have been no permanent family connections with this home.

"White Hall" was heired first by Mrs. Elizabeth Ridgely, wife of the third Jol. Henry Ridgely of Anne Arundel County, and daughter of Benjamen Warfield, one of the original surveyors of "Wincopin Neck". It was later heired by Alexander Warfield, son of Richard Warfield II, who was a brother of Benjamin.

Alexander put his son Resin and Honor (Howard) Warfield upon it. Honor Howard was the daughter of Henry and Sarah (Dorsey) Howard. it came to Anne Warfield, daughter of Rezin and Honor Warfield, who was the wife of Major Richard Lawrence of Revolutionary Fame, who was known as Major Lawrence of "White Hall".

It was from this "White Hall" Mrs. Rezin Warfield went out as the bride of her husband's cousin, John Davidge to hand down her two celebrated sons, Dr. John and Henry Davidge, and afterward to die the widow of two more husbands.

Removing from his birthplace in Anne Arundel County, a Dr. Carles Griffith Worthington (of Thomas) bought of Samuel Burgess and leonard Sellman their interest in a surrounding survey called "Warfield's Range". Here Dr. Worthington organized the first medical school in the Province. This embryo-medical college still stands.

Dr. Worthington acquired adjoining property for the purpose of settling his sons upon it, all of which was called "Worthington's Addition". Dr. Thomas C. Worthington, his son and successor had already adjoined his father on the north before he fell heir to "White Hall". He married a daughter of Ralph and Harriet (Warfield) Dorsey and among their children were three sons; Brice, Charles Griffith II, and Thomas.

Upon the death of Thomas C. Worthington, who was possessed with a patriarchal beard, handsome form and courtly manners, so characteristic of those early founders of Colonial History in Maryland, "White Hall" passed to his son Brice, who was a bachelor, and from Brice Worthington it passed to his nephew, Dr. William Henry Worthington.

Dr. William Henry Worthington, (Jan. 30, 1812 - Jan. 5, 1886), a son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Baldwin) Worthington was very young when both of his parents died. His uncle, Dr. Charles Griffith Worthington II, became his guardian and with him he studied medicine at the first medical college just in sight. He graduated at the Maryland University at the age of twenty-one.

In 1858, Dr. William Worthington sold the old home "White Hall", and reserved the graveyard, with a right of way make use of it. Up to that time, there were five generations

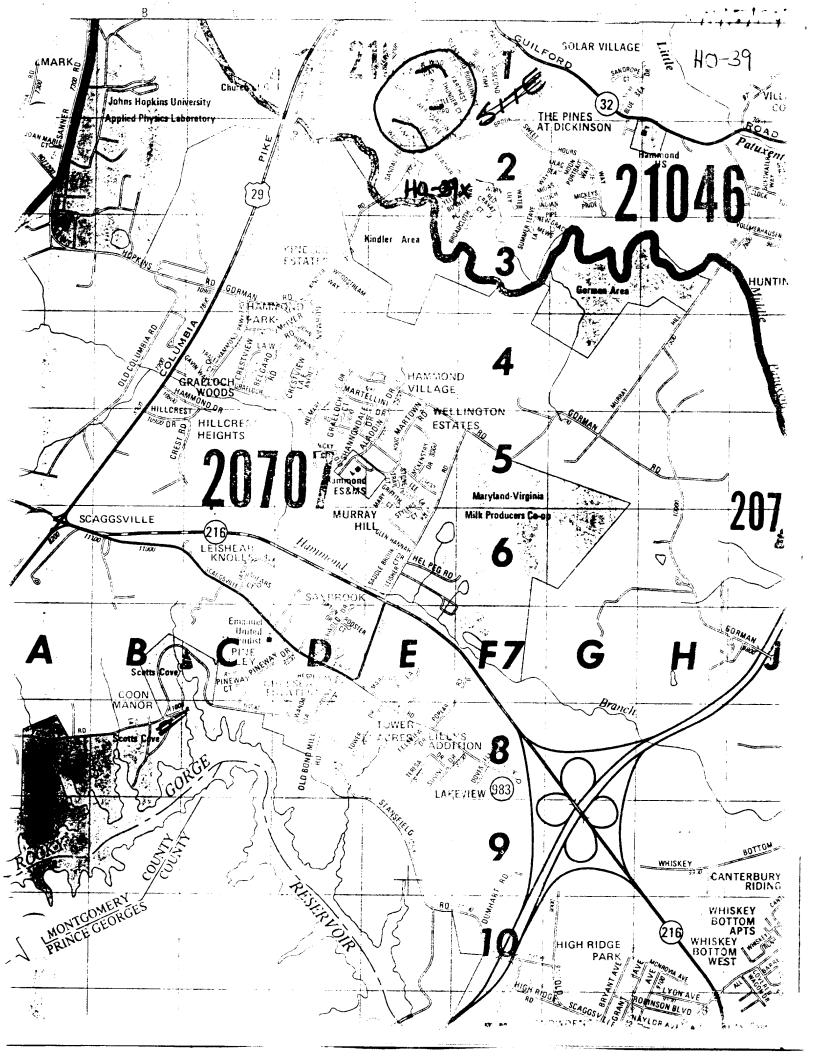

Although the plot, enclosed within an iron fence, has been respected by the owners of "White Hall" since 1858, many of the inscriptions on the old tombstones are scarzely legible. In the face of age, there is an approaching danger that in the near future, all trace of the burials made here may be obliterated. In order that some record be maintained for posterity, a list of tombstone inscriptions will be found at the end of this article as they were observed by the writer.

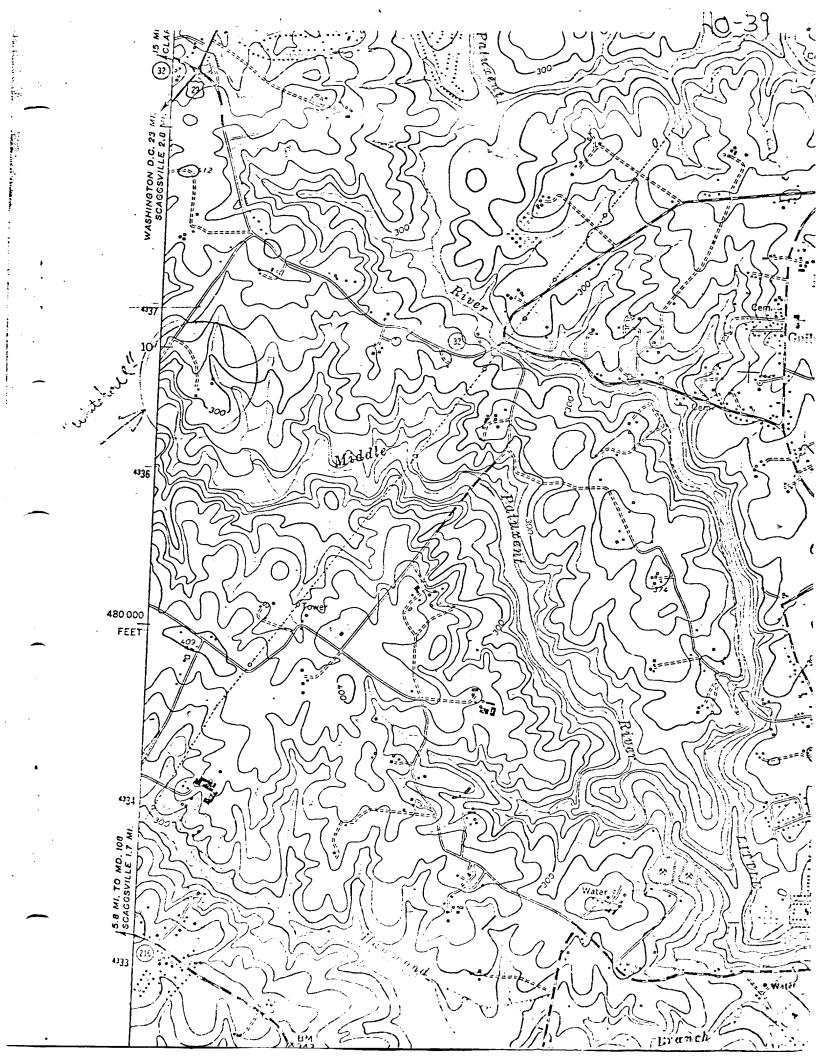

Richard H. Diggs, James M. Walsh and Philip B Pollard were consecutive owners of "White Hall" over a ten year period before it was finally purchased in 1868 by Timothy Smith Hegeman of Jamestown, H. Y. who was a direct descendant of Adrian Hegeman, an emigrant to New Amsterdam, now New York City, from Amsterdam Holland in 1651. Timothy Hegeman (Feb. 12, 1821 - July 11, 1901) married Phebe Mudge Willets (June 8, 1832 - Nov. 5, 1920) of Manhasset, Long Island and they had four children; Jeremiah, Rebecca Jane, Willet and Henry.

After the death of Timothy Hegeman, his son Jeremiah, unmarried, remained at "White Hall" with his mother. When his mother became ill and Jeremiah was no longer able to care for his mother unassisted, he was joined by his brother Willet, a widower, who left his large farm in Horseheads, N. Y. and came to "White Hall" where he devoted himself to his mother's care until her death. Two and one half years later, May 18, 1923, "White Hall" was sold by the heirs of Timothy Hegeman to its present owner, Henry J. W. Sieling. At that time, Willet took his brother home to his farm in Horseheads, N. Y. where Jeremiah lived until his death, Dec. 23, 1924.

An interesting early survey of the remaining part of the original "Wincopin Neck", consisting now of approximately 150 acres which includes "White Hall" follows:

"Beginning for the same at three bounded White Oak trees standing near the mouth of a small branch that empties into the middle branch of the Patument River. being the original beginning boundry trees of the land called The said trees "Worthington's Addition", marked on the plot at the letter A, and running thence with and bounding on said land North 58° 15!
