The E. Walter Scott Farmhouse
Clarksville
Private

circa 1844

The E. Walter Scott Farmhouse faces south on the north side of Route 32, just east of its intersection with Trotter Road. It is a four bay wide, one room deep, two story high, gabled roof (running eastwest) frame (covered with both vertical and horizontal siding, as well as asbestos shingles) house, resting on a stone foundation, with wide, central, brick chimney between the two first east bays, and a two bay wide, one room deep, two story high, intersecting gable roof (running north-south) frame (covered with asbestos shingles) service wing, which holds a square, central, brick chimney inset into its north wall and an exterior, central, square, brick chimney on its west wall. A one story high, shed roofed, one bay wide, two bay deep, frame (covered with asbestos shingles) kitchen wing runs along the north wall of this wing and another three bay wide, one bay deep, one story high, hipped roof, frame (covered with asbestos shingles) addition runs along the remainder of the north wall or the original house.

A one story high, shed roofed, open porch runs along the south elevation of the house, covering its end bay entrances, supported by four wooden posts, which are held by scrolled brackets.

Fenestration for almost the entire house is vertically aligned, rectangular and double-hung, holding six-over-six lights. The house stands on a part of a tract of land called "White Wine and Claret." which was acquired in 1844 by Catherine and Eliza Warfield in a partition of their father, Richard Warfield's property. Later it was owned by the Dorsey family, and in 1903 conveyed to E. Walter Scott, past Chairman of the Board of Howard County Commissioners, who, with his family, made it his home.

That on the east is a rectangular, cross paneled entrance. The two central bays hold rectangular, double-hung, first floor windows, holding six-over-six lights, underlined by projecting wooden sills and decorated with shutters. A one story high, flat roofed, open porch runs along its entire south elevation, held by five wooden posts, decorated with scrolled brackets.

Three second floor windows, similar to those already described, are vertically aligned to the west bay end entrance and the two central bay, first floor windows.

WEST ELEVATION

The west elevation of the original house holds a single, small, rectangular, one light, second floor window.

The north addition, along the west side of the original building's north wall, holds a first floor, six-over-six light window, while the two story high, intercepting gable roof (running north-south) addition along the east side of the original structure's north wall, holds a first and second floor, six-over-six light window in the south bay of its west wall and a small, rectangular, six light, second floor, casement window in the north bay of this wall.

The west wall of the recent kitchen addition, extending north from the original service wing of the house, holds a first floor, rectangular, six-over-six light window.

The hipped roof, one story high addition beneath holds a central, rectangular, one light entrance with flanking, six-over-six light, rectangular, first floor windows.

The north elevation of the original service wing holds no second floor apertures. Its shed roof, kitchen addition, along its north wall, holds a rectangular, cross paneled entrance and west of the entrance a rectangular, six-over-six light, first floor window.

EAST ELEVATION

The east elevation of the original house holds a central, first and second floor, rectangular, double-hung window, holding six-over-six lights. A six light casement window is placed north of the second floor window.

The east elevation of the service wing holds a first and second floor, six-over-six light window in the south bay and another similar, first floor window in the north bay. A central, rectangular, entrance door lies between. Along this entire east elevation of this service wing runs a one story high, shed roofed, enclosed porch with central, rectangular entrance.

South of the entrance rest three, first floor, rectangular, double-hung windows, holding one-over-one lights. North of the entrance rests another such window and on the north end bay, a rectangular, double-hung window, holding six-over-six lights.

The interior features random width floors, original woodwork composed of fluted pilasters and lintels joined by square corners, decorated with rosettes, two staircases and mantlepieces.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The E. Walter Scott Farmhouse is architecturally and historically important to Howard County and the State of Maryland as an example of a vernacular, frame, residential building, with later addition, which has been associated with the Warfield, McCauley and Scott families of Howard County.

Architecturally, the building is an interesting composite, which is believed to have began as a two room, two story high, frame building, with wide brick, cooking fireplace on its west wall, which has now been blocked in. In an interview with Mrs. Elizabeth Scott, previous owner and occupant, it was found that the present enclosed staircase, which is located on the south wall of the north addition, was actually a second staircase and that a space had been cut out for an earlier staircase in the east room of the I shaped south wing. This further substantiates the theory that this east room was the original part of the house, to which was later added the west extension and north wing. Interestingly enough, the house may well be post and plank construction, which is covered by vertical siding, topped by horizontal clapboard under metal shingles.

Log joists were also used in the construction of the house. When a heating system was being installed by Mr. Scott, he found a whole tree had been used, complete with two branches of that tree, which formed a "Y". The basement beneath this section is partially of dirt with a stone foundation for the house.

The original east room became the kitchen for the "I" shaped house, whose east-west extension comprises a downstairs hall and staircase on its' west wall, with a large central, living room and bedrooms above. A stove pipe hole, inset into the wide, brick chimney of the original east room, provided the heating system for this section of the house. The woodwork of this west extension features fluted pilasters and lintels, joined by square corners with rosettes. When this section of the house was built, the owner put a sub floor in, in order to store a bumper crop of wheat. Later, the partitions were put in, but the floors were bowed from the weight of the grain, creating poor alignment, as seen in the west door of the central living room, which leads into the hall.

Significance Statement (Con't)

Sometime later, the north wing was added as a new kitchen and the old kitchen, located in the original east room, then became a dining room.

In 1910 the shed roofed kitchen addition was constructed off the north wing and the second kitchen, located in the north or service wing, then became the dining room. This mobility and expansion is typical of Howard County vernacular architecture, where, as the family becomes more affluent, the kitchen becomes the dining room, the previous dining room, a living room or parlor. This progression can continue on in several stages as we find here.

In 1942 one last kitchen addition was added along the north wall of the west extension to the original house. At this time, two generations of the Scott family were living in the house, with a separate kitchen provided to each.

Today, it holds only a single family. Certain partitions have now been made to the hall, creating a small work room east of the staircase, another example of how houses were molded to fit the needs of their occupants. The 1942 kitchen, has also been converted into a laundry area, since it is no longer needed as a separate kitchen. Historically, this house is located on part of a tract of land called "White Wine and Claret". The original east room was probably constructed much earlier then 1860, when the house appears on the 1860 Martenet map, associated with the Warfield family. Previously it may have served as a dependency to The Old Warfield House, which stood north of this present house. Nothing remains of the Old Warfield House but its site.

This house is noted in 1860 under C & E Warfield, standing for Catharine and Eliza Warfield, who acquired the property on October 21, 1844, when a "full, perfect and absolute partition of . . . land between . . . Richard E. Catharine W. and Eliza A. Warfield" was made. This property once was a tract of land owned by Elizabeth Warfield, who, in 1824 conveyed the property to Richard Warfield, father of Richard, Catharine and Eliza.

In the partition Richard, the son, was given some land on the south side of "the road leading from Owings Mills (Now Simpsonville) to Green's Bridge . . . inherited under the will of Henry Welling . . " (liber 5, folio 303). Catharine and Eliza were given "all that part of the north side of the said road," which was the tract of land conveyed to Richard Warfield, father of Richard, Catharine and Eliza by Elizabeth Warfield.

Catharine and Eliza owned the property until in 1887 Catharine was involved in a case in equity, which resulted in the house and property being sold to Margaret E. Dorsey for $4,717.50. Another equity case in 1903 resulted in the sale of the property for $34,033.07 to Melville Scott and Edmund Walter Scott, whose family owned the house until 1976, when it was acquired by Mr. and Mrs. Sa-uel Rose.

Mr. E. Walter Scott was one of the three Commissioners for Howard County, who, at his death was serving as Chariman. In 1942 J. William Scott, his son and Elizabeth Scott, wife of J. William Scott acquired the property.

Not only the house remains, but an old frame smoke house, corn crib and thirty feet deep, Stone well, which has never run dry. The barn, which lies east of the house was built circa 1910 and used to be an old sheep shed.

An early road, which was constructed prior to Trotter Road, runs north-south from Route 32, passing on the east side of the house and running north to the Langenfelder Farm on Route 108. The road also led to the original Warfield House, whose stone chimney still remains in the field, north of the E. Walter Scott Farmhouse. A lot of Indian heads and tomahawks have also been found on the property, indicating Indian habitation in this area.
