The Brown House
Elkridge
Private

The Brown House faces east on the west side of Rockburn Hill Road. Originally, the house faced north and was a three bay wide, one room deep, two story high, gabled roof (running east-west) log (covered with siding) house, resting on a stone foundation and featuring mortice and tenon construction, marked with Roman numerals. Two additions were made. One is a two story high, two bay wide, one room deep, intersecting gable roof (running north-south) frame south kitchen addition, with bedroom and bath above, along two thirds of the building's south wall. The other is a one bay wide, one room deep, two story high, gabled roof (running north-south) frame north living room - master bedroom addition, along the west side of the building's north wall. This addition features a two story high north bay window.

The interior of the log house features the original central staircase, random width floors, and batten wood door, while its north addition, through the north bay window, creates a sense of spaciousness. Both the north and south east corners of the building are filled in with one story high, open porches covering rectangular east entrances, resulting in a square first floor plan.

Believed to be the oldest building on Rockburn Hill, the Brown House was owned by Joseph Earp and later by William Burchall, Jr., in the latter part of the nineteenth century.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Brown House faces east on the west side of Rockburn Hill Road.

Originally the house faced north and was a three bay wide, one room deep, two story high, gabled roof (running east-west) log (covered with siding) house, resting on a stone foundation and featuring mortice and tenon construction marked with Roman numerals. Two additions were made to the house. One is a two story high, two bay wide, one room deep, intersecting gable roof (running north-south) frame south kitchen addition with bedroom and bath above along two-thirds of the building's south wall. The other is a two bay wide, one room deep, two story high, gabled roof (running north-south) frame north livingroom addition, with bedroom above, along the west side of the building's north wall. This addition features a two story high north bay window.

The interior of the house features a central staircase with a room on either side. Early construction can be seen in its wide random width floors and batten wood, rectangular, upstairs bedroom door in the original part of the house. Cross paneled interior doors and random width floors are also featured in the other areas of the house.

Both the north and southeast corners of the building are filled in with one-story high, open porches, covering rectangular east entrances, resulting in a square first floor plan.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Brown House is significant to Howard County and the State of Maryland architecturally as an example of a simple "I" plan, log house, evolving into basically a "T" plan, filled in on the first floor by one story high, open porches. It, therefore, represents the evolution of this type of simple, two story high, four room house, extended at a later date to accommodate the needs of its owners.

There are similar houses in the Rockburn Hill Area, namely the residences of Mrs. Cordelia Hansen, Miss Anita Berret, The Goldbeater's Cottage and the Humphries Tenant House, which feature the same interior plan, although the Humphries Tenant House holds a corner staircase, while all the others feature a central staircase.

Historically, the building was once associated with Belmont. Most recently it has been the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Brown, who acquired the property from James L. Enoss on June 19, 1946 (190-373), who in turn originally received the property from William Burschardt on February 6, 1909. (86-589) Formerly, the property had belonged to William Burchall who conveyed it in 1906 to William Buschardt. (82-145)

In the nineteenth century the house was owned by Joseph Earp, who conveyed it on October 25, 1880 to David Todd (42-655), from whom William Burchall acquired the property (67-473).

Believed by local residents to be the oldest structure on Rockburn Hill Road, it should be considered for inclusion to any proposal for The Lawyer's Hill-Belmont Area to become a National Register of Historic Places District, should its owner so desire.
