Richard Burgess Farmhouse
HO-868
1270 Hay Meadow Lane, Sykesville
Howard County
ca. 1860s, ca. 1913, ca. 2000
Private

The Richard Burgess Farmhouse is an altered ca. 1860s, 2-story, center passage, single pile wood frame house with a rear kitchen ell and large turn of the 21st century additions. A ca. 1915 meat house also remains west of the house. The house is located south of Sykesville on Sykesville Road. The property associated with the Richard Burgess Farmhouse is referred to as "Hay Meadow" in the 19th century deeds and neighboring properties remain in related agricultural uses, such as turf farms and hay fields. The Hay Meadow property has been subdivided and two large additional ca. 1990s houses are located south of the Richard Burgess Farmhouse. The property behind the house remains highly picturesque rolling piedmont farmland.

The Richard Burgess Farmhouse, in its original form, had significance as a mid-19th century vernacular farmhouse set in a scenic rural piedmont landscape. Although the form of the original house remains legible, the property has lost historic integrity due to large ca. 2000 additions, exterior and interior replacement materials, which replaced and/or concealed nearly all of the historic materials, and changes to its setting due to subdivision.

Only two families occupied the Richard Burgess Farm before the property was subdivided in the 1990s. In 1861, Richard Burgess purchased 134 acres and constructed the farmhouse. Richard Burgess did not marry and he lived at the farm with his extended family until at least 1910. Richard Burgess left the farm to his nephew, who sold it to Streaker family in 1913. The Streakers held the property until 1993.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Richard Burgess Farmhouse is an altered ca. 1860s, 2-story center passage, single pile wood frame house with a rear kitchen ell and large turn of the 21st century additions. A ca. 1915 meat house also remains west of the house. The house is located south of Sykesville on Sykesville Road. The property associated with the Richard Burgess Farmhouse is referred to as "Hay Meadow" in the 19th century deeds and neighboring properties remain in related agricultural uses, such as turf farms and hay fields. The Hay Meadow property has been subdivided and two large additional ca. 1990s houses are located south of the Richard Burgess Farmhouse. The property behind the house remains highly picturesque rolling piedmont farmland.

House (ca. 1860s)

Exterior

The Richard Burgess Farmhouse is an altered ca. 1860s center passage, end-gable, single pile, 2-story, 3-bay, wood frame house with a 2-story rear kitchen ell, which had an L-shaped footprint. The house was completely rehabbed in ca. 2000. The interior of the house was gutted, additions that more than double the original square-footage were constructed, and the house was resided. The new footprint is essentially a pair of rectangles, with one rectangle set slightly behind (west) of the other. The old section of the house has a stone foundation. The new section has a concrete foundation. The new section has a concrete foundation. The entire house is sided in recent wood siding. The main roof is covered in asphalt shingles and porches and bays have recent standing seam metal roofs. A few window openings in the original house retain early 20th century wood one-over-one windows. Brick interior chimneys are located at the gable ends of the original house.

The front facade of the Richard Burgess Farmhouse faces east. The original house is symmetrical about its entry bay. The 1st story has a tripartite main entry, comprised of new leaded glass front door and sidelights with new wood trim. The main entry is flanked by paired window openings, which hold early-20th c. wood one-over-one windows. The 2nd story has three window openings, which are vertically aligned with 1st story openings. The center window opening on the 2nd floor has a tripartite configuration. Although this window opening now holds new leaded glass windows and has new wood trim, this type of window configuration is common in mid-19th century, late-Federal farmhouses in the area. The center window is flanked by single window openings, which hold early 20th century wood one-over-one windows. A 1-story hipped-roof porch extends across the primary facade. The porch has a concrete deck, and ca. 2000 wood turned posts, railings, brackets, and standing seam metal roof.

The only other visible elevation of the original house faces south. The 1st story of the south, gable-end elevation has two window openings. The 2nd story of the south elevation has one window opening, which is vertically aligned with the eastern 1st story window opening. Window openings on the south elevation also hold early 20th ca. wood one-over-one windows. A round, louvered attic vent is located in the gable end.

A ca. 2000 addition covers the entire west and north elevations of the Richard Burgess Farmhouse and incorporates the rear kitchen ell.

Interior

The interior of the main house retains its center passage, single pile, 1st floor plan. Most historic interior materials have been replaced or covered. The remaining historic features in the interior 1st floor indicate that the house might have been updated in the early 20th century, perhaps when the Streaker family bought the property from the Burgess's in 1913. The 1st floor interior retains wood strip flooring, a turned early 20th-c. newel post, and white marble fireplace surrounds. The newel post has a ca. 2000 brass plaque that states that house was built in ca. 1840. Walls are sheathed with drywall and wood door and window trim with bulls-eye corner blocks.

1 The house's date of construction is based on a combination of map, deed, and census research. The house does not appear on the 1860 Martenet's Map of Howard County. Richard Burgess bought the land in 1861. The Richard Burgess family appears in the location of the Richard Burgess farm by 1870.
is ca. 2000. Random plank pine flooring in one section of the ca. 2000 addition was harvested from an outbuilding previously located on the farm. A brass plaque on the floor states that the floor came out of the original slaves quarters. ²

Kitchen ell
Because the ell is integrated into the new additions on the exterior, and gutted in the interior, it is difficult to date. The roof framing visible in the attic has distinct circular saw marks and a cistern remains in the attic. Many mid-19th century I-houses in Howard County have late 19th-early 20th century kitchen ells and this addition likely dates from that period as well. Only the west exterior elevation of the kitchen ell is visible because ca. 2000 additions cover the north and south elevations. A 1-story, shed roofed addition projects from the 1st story of the kitchen ell. A ca. 2000 window opening is located south of the shed-roofed addition. The 2nd story retains two original window openings, which hold ca. 2000 windows. A four-light wood window lights the attic.

Meat house (ca. 1915)
A ca. 1915 meat house is located west of the Richard Burgess House. ³ The meat house has a rectangular footprint and a gable roof. The building is set on a rusticated concrete foundation and is sided and roofed in cedar shingles. The entry door is located in the building's south gable end. The interior retains metal sheathing on the upper portions of the walls and ceiling and hooks hang from the ceiling.

Site
The Richard Burgess Farmhouse is set on a 40,627 square-foot lot. Two additional house lots were carved from the farm and two ca. 1990s houses are located south of the Richard Burgess Farmhouse. Much of the farmland originally associated with house remains undeveloped behind the house. This farmland, although no longer associated with the house, provides the house with a highly picturesque setting composed of rolling grassland with a tree-lined creek in the mid-ground and a wooded ridge in the background.

² This building is no longer extant, so the veracity of this information cannot be confirmed. While Richard Burgess may have moved to the site prior to end of the Civil War, it is unlikely that previously landless farmers would have owned slaves.
³ The date of construction is based on the use of early 20th features such as the CMU foundation and shingle siding. It is also possible that the building was constructed in the late 19th century and was moved onto the CMU foundation and resided in the early 20th century.

The Richard Burgess Farmhouse, in its original form, had significance as a mid-19th century vernacular farmhouse set in a picturesque rural piedmont landscape. Although the form of the original house remains legible, the property has lost historic integrity due to large ca. 2000 additions, exterior and interior replacement materials, which replaced and/or concealed nearly all of the historic materials, and changes to its setting due to subdivision.

Owners and occupants

Only two families occupied the Richard Burgess Farm before the property was subdivided in the 1990s. In 1861, Richard Burgess purchased 134 acres and constructed the farmhouse. Richard Burgess did not marry. He lived at the farm with his extended family until at least 1910. He left the farm to his nephew, who sold it to Streaker family in 1913. The Streakers held the property until 1993.

The Richard Burgess Farmhouse does not appear on the 1860 Martenet's Map of Howard County. In 1860, Richard Burgess (aged 36) - a farmer - lived in the 2nd Election District of Howard County (Ellicott City) with father John Burgess (aged 69) - a farmer - and his brothers and sisters Mary (aged 35), John W. (aged 31), Susan R. (aged 26), [illeg.] (aged 24), and James (aged 19). They did not own any land and their personal property was valued at $400. Richard Burgess's sister Margaret (aged 23) lived next door with her husband Jonathan Wheatly (aged 31) - a farmer, and their children, Sarah (aged 5), John W. (aged 4), and Margaret (aged 2).4

By 1870, the Burgess's had moved from Ellicott City to the Hay Meadow property. In 1870, the residents of the Richard Burgess Farmhouse were Richard (aged 46) - a farmer, Mary (aged 45) - who kept the house, Alice (aged 25) - a domestic servant, John W. (aged 40) - a laborer, and their father John (aged 75), as well as Richard's niece Sarah Wheatly (aged 14) and her younger brother (aged 7) - who were attending school.5

By 1900, Richard Burgess's nephew George had joined them at the farm. In 1900, the residents of the Richard Burgess Farmhouse were Richard (aged 80) - a farmer, brother John W. (aged 74), sister Alice (aged 60), and niece Sarah Wheatly (aged 45).6 George Wheatly (aged 35), his wife Mary V. Wheatly (aged 24), and their daughter Ethel (aged 1), lived next door.7 In 1910, Richard (aged 89), John (aged 80), and Alice (aged 69) and Sarah Wheatly (aged 54) were all still living at the house. George and Mary Wheatly have the same address. They had 7 children, four of whom survived, by that date: Ethel (aged 12), Charles (aged 10), Amos (aged 8) and Morris (aged 4).8

In 1913, George Wheatly sold the farm to Oscar Streaker and his wife Cora. By 1920, Oscar (aged 33) was a widower and he lived at the farm with Noah Stevenson (aged 49) - who was Mr. Streaker's cook, Christian Kitchner (aged 14) - who was an orphan who worked as Mr. Streaker's chore boy, and James Nicholson (aged 50) - who was a laborer on the Streaker farm.\(^9\) Oscar Streaker remarried the following year and in 1930, he lived at the farm with his wife Edna (aged 31) and their son Oscar (aged 7).\(^10\) In 1991, Edna Streaker gave power of attorney to her sons, Oscar and Marriott and in 1993, the Streaker sold the property to William and Bonnie Green, who subdivided the property and sold the Richard Burgess Farmhouse and current lot.
